- Local market — priced in the state's own currency, for trade inside a country.
- Global market — cross-border trade, subject to import and export tariffs.

No algorithm sets prices. If bread is expensive, it is because players priced it that way — and that is your opening to undercut them.

Listing rules (Update 22):

- Every listing lives 72 hours. Unsold stock returns to your inventory automatically, with a notification — nothing rots in the book.
- One listing per item and tier per market. Listing again at the same price merges into your existing order; changing the price means cancel + relist.
- Relist cooldown. After you cancel a listing, that item and tier wait 5 minutes before you can list them again. Sales and 72-hour expiries never start a cooldown — only your own cancel does.
- Listings start at 100 units for raw materials and 10 for goods.

Taxes and tariffs

Every state sets its own rates, and a president can change them once politics is live. All rates are clamped to 0–50%:

- Income tax — taken from wages when you work.
- Production tax — on RAW output, taken in kind into the state treasury's resource stores.
- Import / export tariffs — applied to cross-border trades on the global market.

A tax is computed as $\lfloor \text{amount} \cdot \text{rate} \rfloor$, with a floor of 1 unit on any positive taxed amount, so nothing taxable slips through at zero.

Donations

Any player can gift a state from its country page: gold and money land in the treasury (logged as donations), raw resources in the state storage — the same stores that taxes feed. Patriotism, war chests, bribes... the ledger doesn't judge.

Currency & FX

Each country has its own currency; gold is the universal, cross-border money. Players trade currencies against gold on the exchange, rebuilt in Update 22:

- Two order walls — SELL and BUY books face each other, best price on top.
- Rate-first orders — you enter a direction, a gold amount (1 lot = 1 gold) and a rate in local currency per gold. One open order per currency and direction; every order expires after 72 hours with a full refund.
- Relist cooldown — cancel an order and that currency and direction wait 5 minutes before you can place a new one. Fills and expiries never start the cooldown.
- Two live charts track gold sales and gold purchases separately, with government treasury orders listed right below them.
- "My orders" always shows every open order you have, with countdowns and cancel buttons; every fill records both parties.

Frontier levy and your FX orders (7 September 2026)

Citizens of an independent region (no state yet) can buy and sell on the global market. In place of a state's import or export tax a flat 10% frontier levy applies to their side of every trade — added on top when they buy, deducted when they sell — and no treasury collects it. Parliament rates and trade agreements never apply to the frontier, so founding a state still pays. Their listings show "Independent" instead of a flag; export bans and embargoes do not touch them.

On the FX page every order of yours now shows filled / total lots and the amount held in escrow until the order fills or you cancel it — a partially filled order is never lost, the remainder simply waits in the book.
