COMMUNITY RULES & MODERATION

What gets sanctioned and how, the chat rooms and their limits, the reporting system, the one-account rule, the help desk and how to appeal a decision.

UPDATED 2026-10-09

THE SHORT VERSION

Play hard, scheme freely, wage war — that's the game. What earns sanctions is what poisons the room: profanity and harassment, hate speech, inappropriate names, spam, cheating and multi-accounting.

REPORTING

Other players' content carries a Report flag: chat messages in every room, private messages, articles, comments, newspapers, parties (the report names the leader) and player profiles. Pick a category, add a note if you like (up to 500 characters), done — the content is snapshotted at report time, so deleting it later hides nothing.

The categories are Harassment, Hate speech, Spam, Inappropriate name, Multiple accounts, Economy abuse and Other.

- You can file up to 10 reports per UTC day, one per piece of content, and never against yourself.
- Reports go to a human moderation queue. Every deduction is a moderator's decision; only the penalty a threshold brings starts by itself.
- Once staff has ruled on a piece of content, later reports of that same content inherit the decision instead of reopening the case.
- Deliberately false reports can earn the reporter a warning.

CHAT ROOMS AND LIMITS

ROOM	WHO READS · WHO WRITES	LIMITS	KEPT
Global	everyone	1–300 characters, at most 5 lines per 5 seconds	cleared at 00:00 UTC
Your language	players whose game language matches (six rooms)	same as global	cleared at 00:00 UTC
Your party	party members	same as global	cleared at 00:00 UTC
Your country	your country's citizens (no room without a citizenship)	same as global	cleared at 00:00 UTC
War room	anyone, spectators included	300 characters, one line per 2 seconds	for good, as the war's record
Parliament floor	every citizen reads; MPs and the president write	500 characters, one line per 2 seconds	one week

The three daily rooms show the day's latest 100 lines. Private messages run up to 1,000 characters; you can block a player from the conversation, which stops their new messages to you.

CHAT LINKS AND PREVIEWS

Paste an article or war link into any chat — global, your language room, your party room, the parliament floor or a war room — and a compact preview card appears under the message: the article's title with its newspaper, likes and comments, or the war's two sides with flags, the contested region and whether it is still active. The card is the link. At most two previews per message. Any other Parlamentum link (a profile, a company, a region) is clickable and opens in a new tab; links to other sites stay plain text.

Every room is moderated the same way. The report flag sits on other players' messages in every room, including the war room and the parliament floor, and staff read all rooms.

THE CREDIT RECORD

Every player holds up to 100 credit. A moderator takes credit away for a violation: the catalogue below suggests the points, the moderator decides. When your credit reaches a threshold, its penalty starts by itself; when one deduction crosses several thresholds at once, only the heaviest applies. Each deduction reaches you as a notice with the reason, your credit and what the next threshold would bring. Everything is on the Record page in the gear menu: your credit, the penalties in force, every deduction and older warnings.

CREDIT AT OR BELOW	PENALTY
90	Chat mute · 1 h
80	Chat mute · 12 h + DM ban · 6 h
70	Chat mute · 1 day + DM ban · 12 h
60	Chat mute · 3 days + DM ban · 36 h + Article ban · 1 day
50	Chat mute · 7 days + DM ban · 84 h + Article ban · 2 days
40	Account ban · 1 day
30	Account ban · 3 days
20	Account ban · 7 days
10	Account ban · 30 days
0	Permanent account ban

Credit grows back by 1 at 00:00 UTC every day, never above 100, and not while the account is banned. A running penalty is never shortened by a lighter one. A deduction that starts an account ban takes effect at once and is reviewed by an admin.

A ban does not take your offices by itself; inactivity does. An account nobody opens for 15 days — for any reason, a long ban included — falls inactive and leaves its offices, its party and its job.

SUGGESTED DEDUCTIONS

VIOLATION	POINTS
Provocation	2
Asking for personal information	5
Light swearing	2
Heavy swearing	5
Swearing at or insulting staff	10

VIOLATION	POINTS
Spam	2
Advertising other games	5
Provoking the community	20
Racism	30
Demeaning religious or national values	30
Swearing at or insulting religious or national values	40
Commercial advertising and fraud	100

Real-money trading, multi-accounting and complaints about staff are not credit matters: the staff review them and decide separately.

OTHER SANCTIONS

Besides credit, moderators keep a manual toolbox for cases outside the catalogue, from 1 hour to 365 days or permanent: a warning, a chat mute (every chat surface: global and language rooms, party chat, war chat, the parliament floor), a DM ban (no private messages, and no notes on contracts), a press ban (no publishing, renaming a newspaper or commenting), a name reset and an account ban. Every action lands in your record with its reason, and you are notified.

ONE ACCOUNT PER PERSON

Multi-accounting is the one economic sin the desk hunts systematically: side accounts that vote, funnel gold or pad parties distort everyone's game. Possibly linked accounts are flagged for human review, and unusual transfers between players are reviewed by staff — no machine issues a punishment. Sign-up itself allows one account per mailbox (Gmail addresses that differ only by dots count as the same mailbox) and refuses disposable e-mail addresses, "+tag" e-mail aliases and failed bot checks. Siblings or roommates who play from the same home can get flagged by accident; if that's you, just say so in a ticket — every case is reviewed by a person.

THE HELP DESK

Help Desk in the Help menu is where you write to the staff. Choose Bug report or Suggestion, pick a topic — Economy & Markets, Wars & Military, Politics & Laws, Map & Travel, Account & Profile, Penalty appeal, Interface & Design or Something else — and describe it in 10 to 2,000 characters.

- You can open up to 5 tickets in any 24 hours.
- Every ticket keeps its conversation: staff replies arrive in the thread, and your own reply reopens the ticket.
- Once a ticket is closed you can rate the help you got, 1 to 5 stars, once, with an optional note.

The help desk is not for reporting players — use the Report flag on their message or profile instead.

APPEALS

Any sanction can be appealed: every deduction on the Record page has an Appeal link that opens a help-desk ticket on the Penalty appeal topic with the deduction named; for anything else, pick that topic yourself and name the penalty, when it happened and why you think it was wrong. Staff can revoke actions; a revoked deduction gives the points back and lifts its penalties at once. Honesty helps: players who self-reported a second account and simply stopped using it have kept their main untouched.
