BOOK WORLD & CITIZENSHIP

READING THE MAP

The three map modes and their legends, war arrows and plaques, torches, shields and anchors, the hover card, and every tab of the region panel.

GETTING AROUND

The world map opens from World → Map; World → Region opens it on the region you are standing in. Drag to move, scroll or pinch to zoom, or use the − and + buttons at the foot of the map console.

- Click a region to select it: a gold ring marks it, every region outside its state steps back a little, and the region panel opens — on the right on a computer, as a sheet from the bottom on a phone.
- Hover a region with a mouse and it lightens while the hover card follows the cursor. On a touch screen, a tap selects instead.
- The page address keeps the mode and the selected region, so a copied link opens exactly the same view.

WHAT THE MAP DRAWS

- States fill their regions in their own colour. Along a border between two states, each side carries a band of its own colour; the borders between regions are fine ivory lines.
- State names curve along their land. A name grows with the state's number of regions, never its area, and when two names collide the state with more regions keeps its label. A state with 6 or more regions flies its flag above its name.
- As you zoom in, state names fade and region names appear.
- Capitals wear a ring in the nation's colour under a gold star.
- You are here — a pin marked YOU stands on the region you are in.

- Terrain — the Terrain & ocean imagery switch adds relief shading and land tints. It is off by default, and your choice is remembered on that device.

THE MAP CONSOLE

The console sits in the bottom-left corner.

- Its head holds the three modes — Political, Resources and Wars. The Wars tab carries a live count of the wars being fought.
- The arrow beside them opens the legend (folded at first; the device remembers if you open it). It starts with World information — six numbers: the population of the world, of your country and of your region, and the number of countries, regions and independent regions. Each opens its full table. Below them is the legend of the mode you are in.
- Its foot holds the Terrain switch and the zoom buttons.

POLITICAL MODE

The default view: who holds what.

LEGEND	MEANING
Independent (open)	a playable region no state holds — anyone may fly in
Locked in beta	a region that is not open for play yet
Nation color	the state that holds the region
You are here	your current region
Capital	a state's capital
Torch	a rebellion is gathering
Shield	a protected region

RESOURCES MODE

Every deposit is drawn as a medallion with its resource's sign and its bonus beside it — the production bonus a RAW company of that resource gets in that region. Where two overlap, the bigger bonus is the one shown.

The legend becomes a filter: All, or one of the seven resources (Grain, Iron, Oil, Cotton, Timber, Coal, Copper), each with how many deposits it has. Tap one to see only its deposits. Torches and shields are hidden in this mode. Deposits and their bonuses are explained in Citizenship & the World Map.

WARS MODE

Every active war is drawn on the map.

- Arrows run from the attacking region to the contested one, in the attacker's colour (rebels attack in rose). The larger the attacker's share of the damage, the fatter the arrow. Chevrons pulse along it.
- The front — the border the two regions share glows.
- Hatching — the contested region is hatched in the attacker's colour, and the hatching turns dense once the attacker holds more than 60% of the damage.
- Naval wars are a thin sea lane along the fleet's course, with a dashed wake, an arrowhead at the target and a warship halfway. Their markers carry an anchor instead of crossed swords.

The war's marker changes as you zoom:

- Far out, nearby wars group into a badge with their number — click it to zoom in.
- At country scale, each war is a medallion: a ring showing the time left around its sign, and a two-colour bar of the damage split.
- Closer in, the full plaque: both sides with their flags (a torch for rebels), the damage bar with the attacker's share in %, the contested region and the hours left.

Click a plaque or a medallion to open the war. How fronts are fought is on War & the Front.

TORCHES, SHIELDS AND ANCHORS

These markers show over the Political and Wars maps:

- Rebellion torch — a torch over a five-pip meter. Each supporter lights one pip; at five the uprising breaks out as a war.
- Protection shield — no war can be declared on the region until the shield ends, and no rebellion can rise there. The hover card and the region panel show when it ends.

- Anchor — the war around this region is fought at sea. It appears on war markers, in the hover card and on the region panel's war banner.

THE HOVER CARD

With a mouse, a card follows the cursor over the map. It shows:

- the region's name;
- its owner, with the nation's colour and flag — or Independent, or Locked — not open yet;
- At war, with swords, or an anchor when the region's war is fought only at sea;
- Protected until a date, under a shield;
- Rebellion n/5, when supporters are gathering.

NEW REGIONS

When an opening of new regions is scheduled, a small chip in the corner of the map counts down to it, and hovering it says how many regions will open. When it reaches zero the regions open by themselves and the chip disappears.

THE REGION PANEL

Selecting a region opens its panel. Behind the title stands a painting of the city — from a ruin to a capital as its City Score rises.

THE TITLE

- The region's name and its owner — click the owner to open the country page — or Independent.
- Coastal or Caspian coast, when the region lies on the water.
- Protected, with the date its shield ends.
- A war history button, once wars have been fought here: every finished war, newest first, with its sides, its outcome (Captured, Defended, Rebels won, Rebellion crushed, Landing repelled) and its damage. Each row opens the war.
- A War in progress banner when a war is running here — it takes you to the battle.

A locked region says only that it is not yet open for play.

THE LEDGER

Four numbers under the title:

- Residents — the active players standing here now;
- Natives — the active players whose home region this is;
- Companies — the companies built here;
- the deposit and its bonus, or No deposit.

Residents and natives open a searchable table you can sort by level, Strength, Education, Economy or country. Companies open a table of every company here with its product, type, owner, level and workers; a Hiring tag marks the ones with open jobs.

OVERVIEW

- Capacity — how many active workers the region has against how many it sustains, how full it is, and whether work here currently gets a work output penalty, a pioneer bonus or full work output. When a penalty is on, the panel says roughly when it ends if nobody works here meanwhile. See Infrastructure & Region Capacity.
- Rebellion — supporters so far out of five, and the Support the rebellion button (50 gold, burned) when a rebellion is possible here.

CITY

- The City Score card with the city's rank, taken daily at 00:00 UTC.
- The five index meters: health, education, military, industry and electricity.
- Buildings — how many of each of the six building types stand here.
- Recent investments — the latest buildings ordered here by law.

POLITICS

- Governance — the owner state's income, production, import and export tax rates, and whether its borders are open or closed.
- Citizenship — in an independent region, how many citizens it has toward forming a state. Then your options: Apply for citizenship (in an independent region) or Become a native here (in a state's region) — a confirmation reminds you of the cooldown — your pending application with Withdraw application, the days left on your cooldown, or a reminder to travel here first. See Travel, Permits & Moving Abroad.

TRAVEL

- You are here, when you stand in this region.
- The work permit application for the state that holds the region, and its status.
- The flight: choose a ticket tier, see the flight time with its breakdown, and press Start flight — it uses one ticket of that tier.
