THE PRESS — WRITING ARTICLES

How journalism works — the article editor, images and tables, reactions and comments, newspapers and newsrooms, trending and the top boards, weekly awards and the Official Gazette.

UPDATED 2026-10-09

WHY WRITE?

The press is how the world learns what happened — wars, elections, market plays, scandals. It is also a competition: articles count unique views and reactions, the press front page leads with what is trending, and every Monday at 00:00 UTC the week's top author (Journalist of the Week) and top paper (Newspaper of the Week, paid to its owner) win 250 gold and 500 gold respectively, a spot in the hall of fame and a profile badge that counts every win. Every citizen's dashboard shows the latest articles in their own language.

THE EDITOR

Press Write article on the press page. An article needs a title of 3–120 characters and a body of 10–20,000 characters. The body is Markdown with a toolbar: bold, italic, headings, lists, quotes and tables. Use Preview (or the live split view on desktop) to see exactly what readers will get.

- Byline — publish under your own name, or under a newspaper you own or edit for.
- Article language — every article carries one of the six game languages; pick it in the form, or it takes your own game language. Readers filter the press by it.

ADDING IMAGES

1. Upload your image to one of the supported sites: Hızlıresim, PostImages or ImgBB (the toolbar's image dialog links them).
2. Copy the direct image link (it starts with `https://` and usually ends in `.png` or `.jpg`).

3. Paste it into the image dialog — it validates the link instantly — or write it by hand:

```

```

Images in the body from unsupported sites render as a placeholder card, never as a broken embed. You can also set a cover image for your article — it shows in listings, on your newspaper page and in the headline slot. A cover from an unsupported site is refused when you publish.

ALIGNMENT

Wrap any block in an alignment container (the toolbar buttons do this for you):

```
:::center
This paragraph — or an image, or a table — is centered.
:::
```

`:::right` and `:::justify` work the same way. Everything else stays left-aligned.

TABLES

```
| Country | Treasury | Trend |
| --- | --- | --- |
| Turkey | 12,400g | ▲ |
```

Authors can delete their own articles at any time; the article's comments and reactions go with it.

READERS, REACTIONS AND COMMENTS

- Views — each reader counts once per article, as a unique view. Reading your own article does not count.
- Like / Dislike — one reaction per reader. Press it again to take it back, or press the other one to switch. You cannot react to your own article.
- Share — beside Like and Dislike, it opens the article's link ready to copy. Pasted into any in-game chat, the link renders as a small preview card — title, newspaper, likes and comments — that opens the article.
- Comments — up to 500 characters. You can reply to a comment (replies go one level deep) and like comments. The author — and the paper's owner, when that is someone else — is notified of every new comment.

A press ban stops a player from publishing, commenting, founding a paper and renaming one.

FINDING ARTICLES

The press page opens like a front page:

- The week at a glance — a strip counting the articles, reads, reactions, papers and comments of the last 7 days.
- Trending now — the headline, with Also trending beside it: the day's most talked-about pieces. Trending looks only at articles from the last 24 hours; likes and readers push an article up, dislikes pull it down, and its pull fades as it ages — so a fresh, discussed story overtakes yesterday's hit.
- The feed — Latest (the default), Top today (since 00:00 UTC), Top this week (the last 7 days) and Top this month (the last 30 days). The Top boards rank by likes minus dislikes. Language chips filter the feed; it opens in your own game language, and All languages shows everything.
- Press League — the top ten papers and journalists of the week or the month, by score (below).
- Hall of fame — last week's winners.

NEWSPAPERS & NEWSROOMS

Founding a newspaper costs 5 gold, one per player. Its name is 3–40 characters and unique; a short "about" text and a logo are optional, and the owner can rename the paper later.

- Editors — the owner invites players by name; once an invite is accepted, the editor can publish under the paper's masthead, and the article shows both the paper and the author. A paper has at most 5 active editors: invites can go out freely, but accepting one fails while five are active. Editors can resign; the owner can dismiss them.
- Subscribers get a notification whenever the paper publishes. You cannot subscribe to your own paper.
- Deleting a paper keeps its articles, as standalone pieces, and drops its subscriptions.

WEEKLY AWARDS

Every Monday at 00:00 UTC the game scores the articles published in the week that just ended (Monday to Sunday, UTC). An article's score is 3 points for each like (minus 3 for each dislike) plus 1 point for each unique view — the same score the Press League shows.

- Journalist of the Week — the author with the highest total wins 250 gold.
- Newspaper of the Week — the paper with the highest total of the articles it ran; its owner receives 500 gold.

A winner needs a score above zero; a quiet week can go without one. Winners are notified, enter the hall of fame and wear a badge on their profile that counts every win.

THE OFFICIAL GAZETTE

The President or the Interior Minister can designate one newspaper — owned by a citizen of the state — as the country's Official Gazette, from the newspaper's page, and can withdraw the title. The owner is notified. The paper carries a golden ribbon on its masthead and appears on the country profile with its latest articles. No mechanical bonus: pure, very visible prestige.
